Travelers can select their preferred language, which makes them ideal when you're traveling in a foreign country. Show your passport to the desk personnel or swipe it through the machine for self check-in. First, you will need data or a Wi-Fi connection to access your ticket. While EarlyBird Check-In doesn't guarantee an A boarding position, it improves your seat selection options to help you get a better seat. Check in online within 24 hours of the flight and look for this option. Find the Delta check-in area at the appropriate terminal. What do you get? Page 3 Aside from reducing waste and helping the environment, electronic tickets benefit travelers in many ways. The thing to remember is that you'll likely want to have more than one of these on-hand as an extra precaution, in the event that the e-ticket number was written down wrong or the ID scanner isn't working properly. Better boarding position We'll automatically check you in and assign your boarding position 36 hours before your flight's scheduled departure - that's 12 hours before general boarding positions become available. Log onto the airline's website and check in for the flight. Phone in hand, you can head straight to the TSA security checkpoint. Once onboard, passengers can choose any empty seat. The Delta e boarding pass is popular with travelers and can be used at airports all around the world. Using a kiosk has a few benefits. Online check-in is available starting 24 hours before the flight departs. Customers checking bags can select the number and print out baggage tags with their boarding passes for a smoother transition over to security. This service is generally free, although some budget airlines, including Spirit, charge a small fee for using counter service. Some major e-ticket airlines, like Delta, even let customers use identifiers like a SkyMiles card to access their boarding passes. For starters, a mobile boarding pass is a lot easier to keep track of than a paper ticket, as long as you don't lose your phone. Flyers can type either of these into a self-service kiosk at the airport to find and print their boarding passes. With JetBlue, for example, passengers should download the airline's app to their phone where they can check in, access their ticket and even select a seat. Collect your tickets and proceed to the security checkpoint, where you will need to show your tickets and your passport. Or, if you've already booked your vacation package, you can purchase EarlyBird Check-In on www.southwest.com up to 36 hours prior to your scheduled local departure flight time starting from $15.00 per person each way (fee is subject to change at any time). For frequent flyers who may not always have access to a printer, the Delta e-boarding pass makes checking in for flights a seamless process. This service is free, but it's customary to tip at least a few dollars for any skycap service. Carriers have their own flight attendant uniforms, plane designs and luggage restriction. Quick, efficient and hassle-free, mobile boarding passes are making air travel easier on passengers and the environment. Enter your confirmation number, SkyMiles number, credit card number or eTicket number to access the check-in page. Delta closes international check in counters 60 minutes prior to departure. Southwest may send an email with a link once check-in is available for your flight. Most airlines worldwide offer this option via self-explanatory touch-screen kiosks at the airport. The most common forms of accepted identification for domestic travel include a driver's license, passport or military ID. Page 4 Using an e-ticket to check in for a flight can mean the difference between queuing up in long lines at an airport desk and breezing through a self-service kiosk. This site does not include all credit card companies or all available credit card offers. Alternately, print boarding passes yourself from a self-serve kiosk at the airport. Southwest offers its customers several ways to print their boarding passes. Most customers either use an e-ticket number, a record locator, a passport or other identification card used to purchase the tickets online or the major credit or debit card used. The great thing about checking in with an e-ticket at your airport's self-service kiosk is there are a number of ways to access boarding passes. Generally, airlines give passengers the option to print paper boarding passes themselves at home. Not all airports have them, but major ones often do. While checking in at an airport with an e-ticket is typically the most sure-fire way to get the process done quickly, technology is still fallible. Some are generous with the snacks, while others won't even hand out pretzels. You can select EarlyBird Check-In during the checkout process on www.southwestvacations.com. Airline staff can assist you in printing out a paper ticket, so you can continue with your trip. So, how do you get your plane ticket if you bought it online? If you're not sure whether the airports you're traveling through have scanners for QR codes (most U.S. airports do), American Airlines has published a list on their website. This means that showing up at the airport 50 minutes before take-off to print your boarding card isn't going to work. To get a mobile boarding pass, check in online during the 24-hour period before the flight's departure. Southwest Airlines check-in is similar, and mobile boarding passes can be downloaded in the Southwest app or saved to your smartphone. Agents at the airline's ticket counter can always help passengers get their boarding passes printed. The app, which is also available in Spanish, can be scanned at U.S. airports as well as in a few places abroad. The first option is to print your pass at home. Print your boarding passes from the website, or choose the "print later" option to print them at another time, or when you are at the airport. If you choose the mobile option, take a screenshot of the pass just in case internet issues don't allow you to load the pass when it's time to board. Warnings You can only check in online and print your boarding pass up to one hour before your flight. Be prepared to show photo ID. Most airlines have a streamlined desk for customers who only need to drop off their baggage, so the time saved is worth the preparation. Writer Bio Kathryn Walsh has been writing about travel topics for more than 10 years, but has been feeding her inner travel bug for much longer. Since air travel can be stressful enough as it is, taking measures to ensure a smooth check-in process to avoid any last-minute snags is paramount. Travelers who already checked in online may get their boarding passes printed from either a kiosk or a ticket counter. One of the easiest and most-effective ways to get through TSA security checkpoints without a hassle is by printing out your boarding pass with an e-ticket number. A mobile boarding pass works just like a paper ticket. Arrive at the airport two hours prior to departure to allow time for security checks. When other carriers started charging passengers for checked bags and carry-ons, Southwest held fast to its no-fee commitment: It's the only major American airline that lets all passengers check not just one, but two bags, for free. Airlines often suggest passengers arrive at least two hours before an international flight, but waiting in a long line at the ticket counter will eat up some of that time. Economy check-in forms one line, while business, first class and elite SkyMiles members form another queue. Some international airlines also offer e-tickets, such as Lufthansa and Emirates. Page 5 At the Airport Arrive at the airport two or three hours before an international departure. Use a confirmation number, credit card or passport to access it. It contains your name, flight number and a QR code that can be scanned by TSA agents as well as by flight staff before you board the plane. Because accessing the boarding pass may require that the holder have internet access - and technical issues tend to happen at the least-convenient times - take a screenshot of the boarding pass and save it to the images folder of the phone or tablet. Read terminal signs to find out which airlines are served by which terminal. Using Your Mobile Boarding Pass at the Airport Keep a few things in mind when using your mobile boarding pass to ensure hassle-free travel. Airlines let you collect your mobile boarding pass differently. Using a Southwest Boarding PassThe Southwest Airlines check-in process is similar to that of other carriers, but the boarding process takes some travelers by surprise. Drop your checked-in bags at the desk marked "Baggage Drop" near the Delta check-in desk. Travelers must be age verified, and meet the fare and security requirements of the airline. References Resources Tips If you provided an email address when you booked your Southwest flight, the airline will send you an email 24 hours before departure notifying you that you can check in and print your boarding passes; the e-mail will contain a direct link to the online check in system. This is before our general 24-hour check-in begins. Her favorite place to visit is Scotland, and her work has appeared on sites including USAToday, AZCentral and Choice Hotels. Select your preferred delivery method. Keep in mind that for an international flight, boarding time isn't the only factor in determining when you should get to the airport. This becomes even more convenient for ticket holders with smartphones, as most airlines accept mobile boarding passes that can be downloaded directly to a cellphone and scanned directly from the phone's screen. Travelers can use their electronic boarding pass from their email or text message link. Follow the directions and choose the option to print your boarding pass from your printer. You will need your airline confirmation number located on your itinerary and e-travel documents in the flight details section. After the account is pulled up, some screens will prompt a selection of seats and ask if any baggage will be checked. When a group number is called, everyone from that group lines up to board the plane. It should look similar to a paper boarding pass, right down to a scannable bar code. Earlier access to overhead bins Got bags? Where other airlines zig, Southwest zags. The kiosks also have scanning devices for passports and licenses, and customers can scan these documents to get their boarding passes as well. If you opted to purchase Southwest's "Early Bird Check In" option when you booked your flight, you will be automatically checked in 36 hours before the flight; you can print your pass at home 24 hours before your flight or obtain the pass at the airport. Automatic check-in Whether you choose to print your boarding pass the day before or just hours before the flight, your confirmed boarding position will be ready and waiting for you. If you purchase EarlyBird Check-In, we'll automatically check you in and reserve your boarding position 36 hours before your flight's departure. Most airports have transportation between terminals, so don't worry if you are not dropped off at the correct terminal. Many of the credit card offers that appear on the website are from credit card companies from which ThePointsGuy.com receives compensation. Change your seat assignment, if necessary and choose the number of bags you would like to check. They're available for all domestic Southwest flights but not for international ones. A Southwest boarding pass has a group number and boarding position rather than a seat number. Online Go to Delta.com and click on "Itineraries and Check-In" to find the online check-in link. As with anything, though, knowing exactly what steps to take is key. Drop your checked-in bags at the desk and collect the claim check stubs for them. (If the boarding pass is misplaced before the trip, print another copy from the Southwest website, or get another copy printed once you reach the airport.) To print the boarding pass at the airport, look for a Southwest skycap outside the terminal. Use the self check-in kiosks or wait for an available desk clerk to check in. Not all travelers are eligible for online check in. (Even Southwest's boarding process, which is run differently from other airlines, allows for the use of mobile boarding passes.) Using a mobile boarding pass saves paper and makes it harder to lose the pass. Drop off any checked bags here, too. Some smaller regional airports take longer to get this option set up. A mobile boarding pass can be texted or emailed to you or viewed in your browser. These numbers are longer than the record locator - sometimes called a confirmation code - which is often a six-digit number emailed to the customer that helps you access the online reservation. Lining up for the attendant-operated check-in desk is always a fail-safe. Before banking on using a mobile boarding pass, though, check the airline's website to make sure they're accepted at your airport. Generally, mobile boarding passes are accessible starting 24 hours before departure. Major airlines generally have these kiosks in major and smaller airports in the United States and in other countries. If you use one, you also can take care of other business at the same time, such as nabbing a window seat and printing out tags for checked baggage. If it's not possible to load the boarding pass when it's time to board, pull up the screenshot and use that instead. It's also best to increase the display brightness on your mobile device because a brighter screen makes it easier for the scanner to read the QR code. Tip Print Southwest boarding passes from your home computer, curbside at some airports, or inside the airport at a kiosk or Southwest ticket counter. Now that nearly everyone travels with a smartphone or other handheld device, major airlines allow passengers to use those devices to access boarding passes. Confirm your flights and request a new seat assignment, if desired, from the kiosk or with the agent. For travelers who feel strongly about seat locations, paying extra for Southwest EarlyBird check-in can be useful. In the event that the self-service kiosk breaks down, or, for some reason, it won't let you check in, don't panic. But the major airlines have nearly identical policies about some things, including boarding passes. We've got room. But while this airline has some quirks, its boarding pass printing options are similar to those offered by its competitors. Tip Whether you're flying international and have a Delta e boarding pass or are looking to simplify your next Southwest Airlines check-in, electronic tickets allow you to use your phone instead of a paper boarding pass. Printing Passes at the Airport While handheld gadgets are everywhere, the airlines recognize that not everyone has them or can use them. Skycap podiums are set up to allow passengers to check in and receive their printed boarding passes. Page 2 Every airline has its quirks. How do I purchase? All airlines will let you know if mobile boarding passes are available, usually in your confirmation email. Mobile boarding passes also can save on valuable travel time, because unless you're checking bags, you no longer need to collect a ticket at the counter. If you end up having issues with your mobile boarding pass at the airport, don't worry. You can print your boarding pass or download it on your mobile device within 24 hours of check-in. It's common for passengers to have several options to choose from when getting these all-important travel documents. Although Southwest offers several boarding pass printing options, many travelers skip paper passes and use mobile boarding passes. If the ticket you have includes the option to choose a seat, using the kiosk also means getting access to a seat map that shows all the seats currently available. Passengers who opt for EarlyBird are assigned to one of the first boarding groups, which gives them more seat options and early access to overhead storage bins. Southwest also uses an unconventional boarding process because it doesn't assign seats. Similar to a paper pass, you will still need government-issued identification, whether it's for a Southwest Airlines check-in or a flight to Australia. This compensation may impact how and where products appear on this site (including, for example, the order in which they appear). By boarding earlier you'll get a better pick of overhead bin space. Travelers who have baggage to check may still be able to use a kiosk to print a boarding pass. If you are not eligible for online check in, an error message will notify you that you must check in at the airport. Please view our advertising policy page for more information. Ensure you're checked in and have your pass downloaded to your phone before arriving at the airport. The e ticket number can be found either on the airline's website under a customer's reservation record or in a confirmation of purchase email from the airline. Inside the airport, print the boarding pass from a Southwest kiosk or ask an airline agent to print it for you at the ticket counter. However, if time is a major concern, using an e-ticket to check in online before arriving to the airport is another safe and convenient option. Once you're checked in, the site should offer the option to send you a mobile boarding pass by text or email or using the airline's app. Enter your passport number and its expiration date to continue the international check-in process. Join the line for your boarding class. A piece of paper can be misplaced, but most people always have their phones handy. Getting a boarding pass printed at the ticket counter may require standing in line. What to Consider First and foremost, everyone using an e-ticket to check in at the airport should remember that there's a cut-off time for check-in, normally one to two hours before a flight's departure time, and this can be found easily on the particular airline's website. Make a last-minute change before printing the boarding pass.
